

Table of Contents

1	Introduction	7
2	Definitions	12
3	The Historical Context	17
	3.1 Democratization in Thailand	17
	3.2 The Symbol of Democracy: The People's Constitution 1997	23
4	The Prelude to the Coup	27
	4.1 Thailand Under Thaksin Shinawatra, 2001-2006	27
	4.1.1 The Person	27
	4.1.2 The Policies	28
	4.1.3 The Evaluation	33
	4.2 The Protest Movement	41
5	The Seizing of Power and Its Political Aftermath	49
	5.1 September 19, 2006: The Return of the Military	50
	5.1.1 The Military Statements and Justification Attempts	52
	5.1.2 Public Perception and Debate	53
	5.2 The Political Aftermath	57
	5.2.1 The Political Situation Under the Interim Government, October 2006-January 2008	59
	5.2.2 Comparing the People's Constitution of 1997 and the Junta's Constitution of 2007	66
6	Particular Interests in the Coup	70
	6.1 The Monarchy	70
	6.2 The Military	77
	6.3 The Urban Middle Class	84
	6.4 The Rural and Urban Poor Population	91

7	Democratization in Thailand – An Alternative Perspective	96
	7.1 The Concept of Thai-Style Democracy: ประชาธิปไตยแบบไทย	96
	7.1.1 The Guiding Principles	97
	7.1.2 The Historical Development	100
	7.2 The Evaluation of Thai-Style Democracy	104
8	Where is Thailand’s Democratization Process Heading? – A Possible Conclusion	107
	8.1 Contrasting Ideas of Democracy in the Thai Context	107
	8.2 The Military Coup of September 2006: A Step in Which Direction?	111
	Bibliography	115